ReVisionary Thinking: The Science of Adapting to Change

Can you reach your goals, even if things aren't going the way you expect? Most people are good at setting goals and making plans, but not very good at revising those plans when things change. But that's the real work of resilience. Resilience is letting go of the "old way of doing things" and rewriting a script for success that gives you the fastest and best path from where you are to where you want to go. Backed by Courtney's data-driven research, ReVisionary Thinking offers concrete strategies for blazing a new path when the goalposts move on you.

DENNIS MCINTEE

Leading People through Change

There are outstanding opportunities for organizations to grow, yet many leaders face hurdles. In fact, many of these hurdles are internal—not external. According to research by Bain & Company, 85% percent of executives say their greatest barriers to achieving growth objectives actually lie inside their own four walls. Because senior care is changing it is imperative to continually modulate your thinking to deal with uncertainty.

YOGA TO RELAX AND RESET

Kelsea Wright – Limitless Yoga

April 14th | 6:00 – 7:00 AM

April 15th | 6:00 – 7:00 AM

This past year has been full of stress and worry, which tends to show up in the body as tension and pain. During this class you will learn multiple techniques to help you relax the tension that is stored in the muscles and reset the body as a whole. Take this hour for yourself, not only to feel better, but to learn how to continue to feel better. As a person in the service industry, it is important to remember that it's impossible to serve others from an empty cup, always take time to fill your cup!
